A positive idea for us to use now to grow healthy local food in cities...

I was inspired tonight by a different perspective on a vertical farm!

Producing food in stacked greenhouses (or possibly better, us to use more sunlight), in cities, to grow our food from who knows where. Totally hydroponic, no dirt required, nutrients to water that circulates and is therefore controlled technology, but the cost of doing this in cities is high: real estate. There are practical solutions out there.
