A positive idea for us to use now to grow healthy local food in cities...

I was inspired tonight by a different perspective on producing our food: the vertical farm!

Producing food in stacked greenhouses (or possibly better designs that allow us to use more sunlight), in cities, to grow our food instead of ship it from who knows where. Totally hydroponic, no dirt required, add a few nutrients to water that circulates and is therefore conserved. Very low technology, but the cost of doing this in cities is limited by the price of real estate. There are practical solutions out there.
